

CONFERR

Practice Development workshop
Saturday 29th November

The Complexity of Making Money in Private Practice

Using methodology drawn from organisational and self-development trainings, as well as from psychotherapy, this workshop will provide a structure for psychotherapists and counsellors to examine the strengths and vulnerabilities of their current work portfolio, with a specific focus on earning a living.

The morning will begin with an introduction to some of the conflicts or inhibitions we may face about charging, and the needs of the client in relation to our own.

Richard Hawkes and Jane Ryan will then work with you to unravel some of the obstacles you may face in achieving a viable income within an ethical framework. We aim for each participant to leave the workshop with a structure in place for achieving an enriched portfolio of work. Participants may work privately or participate in the group, as they wish.

- Are you working as a psychotherapist for reasons other than earning a living?
- Are you stuck with ethical issues around earning money from this work?
- Are you earning an adequate income? If not, what is limiting your earnings? What would increase these? And how might that be achievable?
- Do you have the range of clients you need? If not, what might be getting in the way of this? How might you shift that obstacle, and what would be the consequences of doing so?
- Are you receiving enough personal/professional support? Do you have a structure in place for sufficient supervision, peer support and networking? What would your ideal support scenario look like? How might this be achievable?
